VICTORIA ON THE THRONE.

G. W. Smalley's London Letter to New York Tribune. Her Majesty acknowledged the grave greeting of her lieges by scarcely more than a glauce of the eye. The head bent slightly, perhaps, but I am not sure. She, too, walks slowly, there is no vulgar hurry about any part of the business. As she rounds the corner of the dais, her face is turned full toward our gallery. It is the business of courtiers to say that the Queen looks always well. For my part, I thought she had grown gray since last I saw her, and that the lines of the temples and about the mouth were cut deeper than ever. It can never have been more than a comely face, and there is nothing, strictly speaking, in its contour, and nothing in the figure, which can be called beautiful or noble.

What strikes you, nevertheless, is the air of authority and the air of stern sincerity which sits upon this royal brow and marks the least gesture of the Queen. The sadness of the face is profoundly touching; the dignity with which the burden—the all but intolerable burden of her life—is borne, ap-peals to your respect. She is here, they say; to mark once more her sympathy with the first minister of the party with the lines intuities of the crown, and with the party which, under his guidance, has been leading this country so strange a dance these three years past. But politics are forgotten in such a presence, and any criticism one has to offer is put decently aside so long as the woman and the Queen is

When she had seated herself upon the royal robes spread over the throne
—which she might have worn, one would think-there is again a pause, almost solemn, and there is time to observe the gown which the Majesty of England has on. The Majesty and Beauty of England are face to face, for the Princess sits nearly opposite; and as the Princess is perhaps the best dressed woman in the room, so is the Queen almost the worst. Her gown is of velvet, with broad longitudinal streaks of miniver or ermine running down the skirt and horizontal trimmings to match about the body. But you need not stop to look at it; the Koh-i-noor glows in her corsage, and a miniature crown of diamonds shines above the stony head. The Princess Beatrice, in blue velvet, stands by her mother's side, with traces of the wo-manly attractiveness which belongs to her sister Louise, now reigning over the hearts of our Canadian friends. There was some maneuvering with footstools and arrangements of trains, and the Queen's veil had to be extricated from the netted work of the throne. Then the Queen said, "Pray, be scated,"

STANDERS TREAT. 11 From the New York Herald. The social habit of drinking at bars, where each member of a party, having been "treated" by another, considers it necessary to treat every other member. has at last attracted the attention of lawsmakers. The Iowa legislature has a mill before it to abolish the custom and make it a punishable offense; and, although such a proposition can never become a law, it is significant as showing public dislike of a custom which no drasting mea wants to be the first to dissected. This habit of standing treat is the cause of more physical and mental discomfort than every other convivial enstom combined; a respectable man who feels the need of a glass of wide or spirits—and there are hundreds ede of such men, in spite of all that the temperance people say to the continue approaches a bar, and finds, perhaps, several acquaintances who are directing, and who invite him to join them. When he has done so, and trank all he came for, his spirit of independence prompts him to return the invitation, which is accepted by the others because it would seem discourteous to refuse; then those who have treated make haste to return the compliment for fear of seeming mean, and the and is that four or five men, each of whom came for a single glass of liquor, works, made report of water rents colretire with several times as much as lected for the months of January and they needed or wanted. Democratic Financiering.

When the administration of Mr. Buchanan came into power in 1857, there was less than $30,000,000 of public indebtedness, which was increased before January, 1857, to nearly $100, 000,000. At one time the treasury was absolutely empty and for a week or two could not meet cash warrants issued for the payment of members of congress and other officials. To obtain the necessary funds for carrying on the government the administration of Mr. Buchanan issued $19,000,000 notes. bearing 121 per cent. interest. Mr. Sherman commenced in the senate, after the advent of the republicans to power, to urge the refunding of the national indebtedness at a low rate of interest, and to day the four per cents.

SENATOR LOGAN TAKES A TILT AT IT.

WASHINGTON, March 1 .- In the senate Mr. Allison, from the committee on appointments, reported favorably for the house bill making appoint ment for the deficiency for the suppor of certain Indian tribes, and stated that he would ask for its consideration tomorrow. Placed on calendar.

Mr. Beck submitted a resolution directing the secretary of the treasury to report to the senate the amount paid out of appropriations for the star postal service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, from July 1st, 1879, to March 1st, 1880, stating the amount paid on each route, and what amount would be required to pay in full for all such star service at rates under contracts now existing for the remainder of the present fiscal year, stating the amount required for each route separately. Adopted.

Mr. Randolph then made a speech in support of his proposed substitute for the committee bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter. The substitute authorized the president to nominate Mr. Porter as a colonel of infantry, his commission to date from January, and to retire him according to law.

Mr. Randolph reviewed the whole does not intend to cut his hair till he case in detail, and during the course of is governor of Illinois. Now old Lew his remarks, said: "We shall show, if it becomes necessary, that not only did Steward declares that he will not clean Gen. Porter know the nature of the his finger nails till he represents the democracy of the seventh district in force from which he did not retreat, but was apprised thereof by General McDowell, who swore before the court martial that he did know the nature of the enemy. There is in the war de state officers, members of congress and partment, or should be, a dispatch from Gen. McDowell, dated a month before litical slates are sometimes broken all the court martial, giving a statement of such knowledge of the nature of the enemy before kim.

After Randolph's speech, Logan obained the floor and stated that he did not wish to speak until to-morrow, but in order that wrong impressions might not go out he deemed it just to say that he thought Randolph's assertion in regard to the disagreement between McDowell's testimony and his report to the war department, it would be found Randolph.-"If I find it so, I shall make prompt and early reparation. I do not want to do any injustice to Gen. McDowell, but I have placed in my hands a report of such date and I certainly have seen Gen. McDowell's testimony of the latter date.

Mr. Logan .- "Of the latter date?" This decision will develop the facts. One other thing I desire to say in behalf of this man who is dead (Douglas Pope) that senator will search in vain to find anywhere in the evidence and admission by Douglas Pope that he had made any misstatement on trial. He swears before the board that he never made such admission, and the orderly that traveled with him swears positively as to the time and route, and the whole thing. Both witnesses stated exactly as he did before the court martial.

Mr. Randolph.—Is it not true that two officers testified that he did make just that admission.

Mr. Logan.-It is true two officers stated that in a casual mess conversation they understood him to say he had met some one on the road that had enied this, and so die

Mr. Randolph .- I have made the statements with care. The facts will be developed in the course of debate.

Mr. Logan.-Certainly; of course I do not mean to insinuate that the senator has made any misrepresentations. He and I understood the evidence differently.

With starvation staring many in the face and deep poverty everywhere, it is sad to hear of strikes in many sections. At Ballinasloe I heard of a strike by men employed upon the relief works; from Limerick comes the same story, vouched for by Lord Dunraven, and in Sligo, Colonel King Harman was forced to stop improvements on one section of his estate because an English laborer went among the men and spread disaffection. The same unfortunate state of affairs is reported in innumerable instances." The writer adds: "Near Cliffden, a Poor-law guardian, while walking along the road, saw three men sitting by the side of it, with their faces between their hands, and their elbows on their knees, all presenting the most woe-begone appearance. Think ing this was a curious attitude for Connaught men, the passer-by asked one of them what was the matter. Mr. Gus Williams, the contains his new edian, appeared last night in his new three-net farcical comedy entitled "Our three act farcical comedy entitled "Our German Senator." It was witnessed with German Senator." It was witnessed with continuous laughter by a crowded house, and won a great success. Mr. Williams was suffering with an attack of rheumatism in the ankle, which made walking very painful, and he was obliged to limp through the part on two stout sticks. But so clever was the play, and so bright and amusing the sayings of the German Senator, that most people in the house thought that his lameness was only simulated as part of the role. It certainly did not lessen the humor or even the gayety of his acting or singing. "Our German Senator" is a comedy which, like most of the sort that are intended to bring out the sort that are intended to bring out the points of a special eccentric character, has no great ingenuity or plot, but a great many effective situations.

A Seasonable Suggestion.

Cincinnati Gazette In view of the desirability of republican success and of decisive success in the approaching election, we desire to impress upon republicans the importance of making no mistake and of avoiding unnecessary risks. We write, not in the interest of men, but of the party. No one has claims upon the party equal to the claims of the party itself. There is no man in the party as great as the party. This is the view that should influence republicans in choosing a candidate, and in selecting delegates to the Chicago convention. Whatever individual preferences may be, the success of that preference in convention would turn to bitterness if it should involve defeat at the polls. It is not the success of the individual favorite before the convention that should govern, but the success of the candidate of the party before the people. The first duty of republicans, therefore, is to send delegates to the convention who will be governed more by sober seriousness than by sentiment and who will be capable of estimating the strength of the candidates and choosing the strongest, without regard to preconceived opinions of the state

"THE GREAT BOOM."

Eighteen hundred and seventy-nine will long be remembered as the time when all kinds of business and financial prosperity seemed to spring into new life. Merchants are finding plenty of ready customers for their wares, mechanics meet with ready employment at fair wages, and the farmers are receiving advanced prices for their products, and it is acknowledged by all that in no part of our country are the evidences of prosperity and comfort so marked as along the entire line of the "Old Reliable" Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad. And to attain these results management of the Hannibal & St. Joseph Bailroad have given their careful though and attention, and the rapid growth of busi ness, and increasing wealth of the communi-ty along the whole line are evidences that their efforts are fully appreciated.
